CPY Management in Study

VIRGINIA BEACH—Twenty-four senior federal employees and a foreign governor are attending a Brookings Institute "Conference on Federal Management and Program Executives" here this week and next. The 12-day conference is being held at the Americana Motor Lodge and ends next Friday.

Wendell Hayes, conference director and member of the senior staff of the Washington-based Brookings Institution, said the purpose of the conference is to broaden the perspective of executives and public servants attending.

He said, "We hope that the people who attend will make better public servants and will better understand the problems of the United States."

The present conference is divided into four sections: the role of the government in free society; economics and public policy; science and public policy; and the United States and world affairs, such as problems in Vietnam, NATO in the United Nations.

Among those attending are Gov. Isidro S. Rodriguez of the Rizal Province of the Philippines; Philip E. Culbertson, director, Lunar Mission Studies Washington; Francis T. Murphy, executive director of the Bureau of Public Affairs, State Department, Washington; Eynon T. Rowland, chief, Office of Communications Security, National Security Agency, Washington; three Atomic Energy Commission executives; and Robert S. Wattles, deputy director of personnel, Central Intelligence Agency.

Hayes described Brookings as a "world famous research organization in the field of government, politics and foreign relations."

He added that all study reports done for the federal government are published by Brookings six months after they are turned over to the government, if the government doesn't publish them.

Hayes said that Brookings doesn't deal with any classified matter or matters of national security. "Our responsibility is to the people; not a thing is secret."
